Case Study

Mr. and Mrs. Smith have worked for Professional Business Associates in the Information Technology (IT) department for quite some time. Six months ago, Mr. Smith was promoted to the IT Department Manager. Three weeks ago, their daughter, Susan, was hired as the administrative assistant in the Human Resource (HR) department.

As a co-worker in the HR department, you have been mentoring Susan when necessary. Recently, you overheard Susan speaking to her mom and sharing some personal information from the file of another employee in the IT department.

- How is Mr. Smith held accountable to his wife's evaluation that he will perform?
- What are your actions towards Susan?
- At what point should hiring family members be considered unethical?
- What if a friend of yours had interviewed for the same position and was more qualified?
- What should her mom's responsibility be from a co-worker standpoint?
