As the world moves to a global economy with easier movement of employees and increased competition, there is a technology skills gap that can be felt in almost every country.

Academic Performance

Several studies show that students who earn certification have an increased graduation rate, higher G.P.A., increased post-secondary enrollment and improved confidence. The Florida Career and Professional Education Department performance report in particular shows an average G.P.A. of 3.09 for students with certification compared to 2.72 for students without certification. An impressive 97.2% of students with certification graduate compared to 83.9% of students without.

Use on Resume

Adobe asked current and aspiring digital media professionals about the essentials for launching a successful digital media career. The entire survey field agreed that certifications can help candidates prove their skills to prospective employers. In a Microsoft Certified Professional survey, 91% of hiring managers said they consider employee certification as a criterion for hiring.
