Ms. Sandy Johnson, Branch Manager
Digital Solutions
544 Office Plaza
San Diego, CA 92101

Dear Ms. Johnson

I am writing this letter to propose a new product sales plan in line with the company's plans of innovation and to improve its sales performance.

In brief, this sales proposal presents that the company should do away with its previous plans and strategies in marketing two of the existing products: CR8 digital software and XTP digital software and instead adopt the following replacement products CR9 digital software and XTP version 3.0. This change will allow the company to achieve its targeted sales quota of 65% every month.

We have scheduled a virtual conference to take place on April 8, 2022 at 10 a.m. to discuss the implementation of these products and to roll out a strategic marketing plan. Roger Meyer will be sharing that plan with you prior to that date in preparation for our meeting. Please let me know if you have any questions or specific information you would like addressed at the meeting so we can prepare it ahead of time.

Thank you for your attention to this proposal and I look forward our upcoming meeting.

Sincerely

Tom Carlson

Careers in International Business and Industry

There are many types of careers in International Business. Executives and managers direct all or part of the activities of an organization. Top level executives establish policies and make important decisions. Middle-level managers carry out those policies and decisions. As an administrative assistant you would work with both levels of managers.

There are many types of management positions in exporting and importing. An export manager is in charge of export operations while an export sales manager is the person who locates trading partners. The export credit manager takes care of credit arrangements with global customers. He or she works closely with the banks.

Import managers are responsible for bringing products or raw materials into the country from other countries. They are called import buyers.

Management positions in international business often require an MBA (Masters of Business Administration) and many years of domestic experience in a specialized area such as marketing, banking, finance, production, or human resources. In order to advance in a company, it may be necessary to have this degree.

Some companies have an international division to handle all overseas business operations. Export management and trading companies handle exports for companies that do not have their own international operations.

MARKETING

Marketing provides consumers with products and services they want in addition to attracting new customers to existing products. People engaged in marketing are doing things like product design, advertising, promotion and packaging, sales, distribution and market research. The difference in international marketing is that the targeted consumer is from another country or culture.

PURCHASING

Many companies purchase parts and supplies from global suppliers in order to keep the prices of their products competitive. Anyone who works in international purchasing must locate suppliers of parts and raw materials. An import manager handles most of these responsibilities.

PRODUCTION

International production involves producing a product or component in another country. If you worked in production, you would need to understand joint ventures, filing patents overseas and the transfer of technology.

HUMAN RESOURCES

All companies that engage in international operations hire, fire, train and evaluate employees including those who work overseas. In human resources, decisions are made about which employees to send on special assignments overseas and who should be responsible for training and preparing employees for overseas assignments. A company might employ an international specialist who has expertise in the culture of the country and business practices to help out with that.
