NATIONAL PRELIMINARY KEY SCENARIO:

Digital Solutions has an event management department that contracts with vendors for the various events they plan. For example, they accept bids for food, bands, tables and chairs, decorations, etc. A new catering company has opened nearby and is working to promote business by providing free catered lunches to local businesses including Digital Solutions. The business owner approached Lynn, the contract manager in the event management department, about giving him catering contracts in exchange for providing free catering for her daughter's wedding reception. Although this new caterer charges a lot more than others, Lynn honors the agreement.

A month later, the same caterer asks Lynn for another contract in exchange for a lunch date. Lynn agrees to lunch which sparks an ongoing relationship between the two. Over time, it becomes common practice for Lynn to award contracts to her new love interest's company without even taking bids from other companies. When her boss takes notice and approaches her about it, Lynn states that they are just friends and that his prices are the lowest. It is later discovered that Lynn has been loaning her company vehicle to her new love interest to make catering deliveries.
