STATE PRELIMINARY KEY SCENARIO:

For the past three years, the employees of Digital Solutions have been allowed to work remotely until further notice. Eight months ago, the employees were called back to in-person work. Athena, who works in marketing, has a compromised immune system and has been allowed to continue working remotely during this time. However, it seems that she is taking advantage of this privilege.

Athena's coworkers have noticed that she is often not available by phone during working hours, and it takes longer than normal for her to return emails. Athena has also begun to miss important work meetings without informing her teammates. Some coworkers have begun to suspect that she is not always working when she should be. Additionally, during video meetings, Athena is sitting in a recliner and appears to be wearing casual clothing, which is not allowed in the office. This has caused hard feelings among some of the on-site employees.

Upon reporting the issue to Athena's supervisor, the supervisor noticed that Athena has also been storing customer contract files on her personal storage devices and having difficulty locating the most recent files when requested. Lastly, it has been discovered that Athena is using her company-issued Internet hotspot device to stream her favorite TV show during and after work hours.

As the Human Resources Manager, how would you handle this situation? In your solution, include recommendations using your Human Resources Manual as a guide.
